Defining Moments, Rewriting Histories

1870's

Rise of Public Health

The advancement of sanitation has been important in the history of public health. In 1875, James Arnott and Francis J. Torrance from Ireland founded Standard Manufacturing to make cast-iron water closets, washstands and bathtubs for the growing sanitation and indoor bathroom market.

Clarence Mott Woolley, forms American Radiator Company in 1892.

John Pierce purchases tinwork shop in Massachusetts in 1872. Forms Standard Sanitary in 1899.

AMERICAN RADIATORS

1910's

Expanding The Product Line

In 1913, American Sanitary purchased the Great Western Pottery Company and began producing enameled porcelain products. The company began selling a complete line of cast-iron enameled kitchen sinks in 1917 after a successful launch at the Pittsburgh Annual Exposition.

1890's

The Growth of The Modern Bathroom

Alongside Standard Manufacturing, two companies producing enameled sanitary products were growing steadily. The first was Dawes & Myler Manufacturing which was founded by ex- Standard Manufacturing staff, Edward L. Dawes and William A. Myler. The other was Ahrens & Ott Manufacturing, set up by Theodore Ahrens and Henry L. Ott. In 1899, all three companies merged to form Standard Sanitary that led the expansion of the bathroom market and made modern bathrooms accessible to all.

1930's

Mega Merger Forms One-Stop Shop

While Standard Sanitary dominated the sanitation and plumbing industry, American Radiator, led by Charles Woolley, was the world's largest supplier of heating equipment. In late 1929, both companies merged to form American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation; creating a single source for craftsmen and driving greater demand for heating and plumbing products.

1900's

Cornering The Market

By 1900, Standard Sanitary had become the world's largest supplier of plumbing goods; producing more than 150 bathtubs per day. American bathroom was modernizing with the country devoting resources to public sewage and bathrooms began moving indoors rapidly.

Standard Sanitary's "Royal Albion"

1880's

The Sanitary Advantage

In 1883, Standard Manufacturing perfected a process to coat pulverized enamel onto hot castings to form a smooth, white surface that was easy-to-clean and impervious to water— preventing corrosion and bacteria from forming and multiplying on the sides of metal tubs.

John C. Reed developed a process he patented to enamel tubs quickly and helped Standard Sanitary rise as the nation's plumbing leader.

1940's

Supporting The War Effort

By 1943, American Radiator & Standard Sanitary virtually halted all peacetime production to supply the armed forces with critical parts and munitions including the mold and castings for the B-29 Superfortress bomber. By war's end, the company had produced more than 2.5 million hand grenades and 75 million cast-iron nose pieces for bombs. A shortage of labor and materials in the post war years forced the company to put products on allocation as demand far outpaced available production.

American Radiator & Standard Sanitary advertised hope during wartime production.

1920's

The Bathroom Comes of Age

White has been the color of choice in American bathrooms. It was clean, bright and sanitary. But in 1926, color made its first appearance in bathroom fixtures from Standard Sanitary. Suddenly style entered the bathroom with a new attitude that made it an integral part of home décor.

1950's

Peacetime Boom

The housing industry recovered quickly after WWII, as affordable housing was required for millions of returning war veterans. The new suburbia was born, and with it the expansion of plumbing products. In 1951, American Standard had moved into the kitchen; introducing steel sinks, steel walls, base and specialty cabinets, automatic dishwashers and electric food waste disposers.

Popular enameled steel kitchen sink with integrated food disposal system.

1970's

Turbulent Times

By 1971, American Standard sales reached $1.4 billion with 70,000 employees. Despite a turbulent economy that led to a decade of controlled growth and expansion, the company grew worldwide. By 1979, it was operating in more than 20 countries and claimed the title as the world's largest plumbing manufacturer.

Refurbished Radiator Building

1980's

The Go-Go Days

By the eighties, sales reached a record high of $2.7 billion and innovation continued to drive market leadership. The company introduced Americast® in 1987, a game changing material that was lighter than cast-iron and more durable than enameled steel, and the Sensorium, the first tub with electronics that controlled in-home appliances.

Made of three layers, enamel, metal and composite backing, this is no ordinary tub. Americast® is lighter than cast-iron and just as strong, making tub installation easier.

New Products For a Modern World

The sixties was a growth era for American Standard. The company expanded its product offerings, and ventured into new markets and technologies. Innovations included the now ubiquitous "push and pull" faucets, slip-resistant bathtubs, odor-removing Vent-Away toilet systems and remote control drain pop-ups. In 1968, a technological breakthrough in ceramic disc valves was added to American Standard faucets – promising leak-free operation for life.

Years of trouble-free performance were made possible through American Standard's patented ceramic-disc technology and washerless faucets.

1960's

1990's

We Want You to Love Your Bathroom

Americans turned their attention to creating stylized living spaces that offered a sense of comfort, retreat and relaxation. American Standard joined the renaissance by acquiring Porcher, a French-based luxury brand and a German-based faucet brand called JADO. In addition, new suites and product lines were added to attract stylish consumers.

TODAY

Fresh Ideas For a New Generation

In 2013, American Standard joined the LIXIL Group of Japan, one of the world's leading building products companies. With annual revenues exceeding $16 billion, LIXIL is a family of brands with leading market position in windows, doors, exterior curtain walls along with kitchen and bathroom products.
